MILES DAVIS /// EDITH PIAF

The International Language of Music

BEYOND THE PERF

Like music, stamps speak an international language — an idea fully expressed when two nations agree to a joint issue. The U.S. Postal Service and La Poste, the French postal administration, are proud to present two stamps that cross borders, cultures, and generations — Miles Davis and Edith Piaf.

When La Poste first approached the Postal Service about a collaboration, the Citizens' Stamp Advisory Committee endorsed the idea — it had been more than twenty years since the last joint issue with France. Many shared cultural ideas and subjects were discussed: Mardi Gras, Art Deco, and Pierre L'Enfant among them.

At about the same time, Stamp Services staff became aware of a significant exhibit in Paris focusing on Miles Davis, the American jazz trumpeter who had performed frequently in France. In fact, in 1991, Davis was made a Chevalier in the Legion of Honor, roughly equivalent to being knighted.

What would make a better joint issue than a stamp celebrating this genius of jazz, a particular favorite in France?

Only one thing: two stamp subjects — an American musician beloved in France paired with an iconic French singer who developed a huge following in the United States. The waif-like Edith Piaf — who moved audiences to tears with her emotional ballads — toured the U.S. ten times, appeared on the Ed Sullivan show eight times, and sang twice at Carnegie Hall.

The tall, cool Davis and the tiny, melancholy Piaf could not have been more different physically. But their ability to speak the same international language — to communicate intensity of feeling through music — makes them a perfect pair of stamps.

A | Miles Davis and Edith Piaf

Jointly issued by the U.S. Postal Service and La Poste of France, these stamps celebrate a lively two-way conversation between continents. Edith Piaf is one of the few French popular singers to become a household name in the United States; the great American jazz trumpeter Miles Davis, admired internationally, is especially beloved in France, where he performed frequently.

WWW.BEYONDTHEPERF.COM

I recently completed one of my first assignments as an art director for the U.S. Postal Service: the design of stamps commemorating the musical genius of both Miles Davis and Edith Piaf. The pair were chosen for the honor of being featured on a joint issue between USPS and France's La Poste — a significant occurrence I was thrilled to be a part of.

Years ago, when I was in art school, my classmates and I were required to fill our sketchbooks with page after page of graphite-smear drawings, none of them larger than a thumbnail. At the time, it felt like busy work. But our teacher's intention was to encourage us to generate new ideas through the iterative act of drawing in miniature. Working on the Miles Davis and Edith Piaf stamps, I found myself thinking of some of the lessons I learned from those tedious days.

Because a postage stamp and a thumbnail sketch are essentially the same size, I forced myself to first sit down and draw — rather than start as usual at my computer. Sketchbook in hand, I tried to imagine Miles and Edith presented at stamp size. But I became almost instantly bored with the idea of portraiture and wondered if there were a way to capture Miles and Edith performing. It was then that I remembered an iconic image of Miles playing his trumpet from the early 1960s.

With much help, I began to research the overwhelming number of photographic images of Miles and Edith. Their physical differences are almost comic: Miles was a tall, black man and Edith was a short, white woman. Miles often wore flamboyant costumes and Edith always wore a basic black dress.

From a design perspective, these were desirable differences that ensured the stamps would be distinctive, that the unique personalities of Miles and Edith would be preserved and even accentuated. But how would I express them together, to create aesthetic harmony? In what ways were Miles and Edith alike?

With those questions in mind, I was struck by the way Miles often leaned back while playing the trumpet and the way Edith used her body and hands to express her voice. I returned to my sketchbook to explore how I could make use of their unique body language. To my delight, pencil strokes helped me discover a simple parallel structure to hold these disparate figures together.

Starting with the iconic image of Miles, I looked back at the photographic research for images of Edith that reflected the same diagonal posture. I found a beautiful image of Edith shot from a slanted angle that enhanced the drama of her posture. As a pairing, these two images of Miles and Edith share a diagonal stress that provided the visual organization I was looking for.

I became so enamored with the stamp framework that I also designed the larger stamp pane in much the same way, creating diagonal movement from the lower left to the upper right. What results — I hope — is a cohesive design that preserves a glimpse into what makes Miles Davis and Edith Piaf so utterly unique and brilliant. ■
